COPYRIGHT AGREEMENT

1. Authors of accepted article(s) assign to ULR the right to publish, disseminate and distribute their text electronically and to archive it permanently for electronic retrieval.

2. Utrecht Law Review applies the Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 Unported License (CC-by, <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/3.0/>) to all articles that are published in ULR. Authors retain ownership of the copyright for their articles, but they permit anyone unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original work is properly cited. After it has appeared in ULR authors may republish their text in any way they wish (electronic or print) as long as they clearly acknowledge ULR as its original publisher with the correct citation details and copyright notice, independent of whether the article is used in whole or in part.

Citation details:

Customary bibliographic citation, including author name(s), volume number and date of publication, article title, Utrecht Law Review, and the URL

Copyright notice:

“This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 Unported License (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/3.0/>), which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original work is properly cited.”

3. ULR may change both the layout and technical form of the article from that in which it is offered to ensure consistency and readability. Under no circumstance the content of the article will be altered.

4. The author warrants to ULR that the article is original, does not infringe any existing copyright, and does not infringe any other rights of any third party. This warrant concerns the entire manuscript, text as well as pictures, sound, video, data sets, etc. The author also warrants to ULR that he/she has full authority to enter into this agreement and that the rights he/she is granting to ULR are granted without breaching any obligations he/she may have.

5. ULR does not accept material that has already been published elsewhere. However, ULR does accept some papers that have been published as abstracts or have been partially reported by the media at scientific meetings, and some that have already appeared in foreign language journals. Previous publication in electronic form, known as preprint or eprint, may also be acceptable. In all these cases authors must inform ULR of previous publication and supply ULR with copies of such previous versions. ULR will then decide whether publication in ULR will add usefully to the literature or whether it will just add redundant material. Publication is considered redundant if the article overlaps by more than 10% with previously published work, or work submitted elsewhere, as decided by ULR.

6. ULR encourages and appreciates links in other Web pages to ULR-webpages. For this reason, permission is expressly granted to any person who wishes to place a link in his or her own Web page to ULR's homepage www.utrechtlawreview.org. As a courtesy, if you link to, or include ULR in an index, please let us know.
